The Rising of Systemic Racism and Redlining in the United States of America

PhD, Edward Brian Flourney, in his essay, “The Rising of Systemic Racism and Redlining in the United States of America”, published on July 29, 2021, they address the topic of systemic racism and redlining in the United States and argue the racial inequality that can be found in our law system. Edward supports this claim by explaining systemic racism, redlining, segregation, and racial discrimination. Flourney’s purpose is to inform the reader of the injustice and hopefully shed more light on the issue in order for changes to be made. Edward uses a tone that fits his informational text best. His goal is to inform the reader of the occurring issue and in doing so adopts an educational tone in his writing.
